Editor's Note

Dear Readers,

Summer is always a season of new beginnings, and this month has given us double the reason to celebrate. We launched Ace Ayodhya at Thergaon in the heart of PCMC and handed over possession of Ace Abode C & E Wings at Kiwale, near Ravet.

Ace Ayodhya is spread across 5 acres at Thergaon and comprises over 900 residential apartments and 50+ high-street retail outlets. Inspired by the principles of Ramrajya, the project is designed around the pillars of Ideal Living.

Our focus has been on Living with Purpose, creating spaces that support modern lifestyles while fostering a strong sense of community. Thoughtfully planned amenities cater to every age group, while abundant green spaces bring harmony between nature and urban living. At its heart lies the idea of "Peace at the Core" – a lifestyle that feels calm and balanced without compromising on everyday conveniences.

The three-day launch witnessed over 1,000 customers visiting our Sales Lounge. We were overwhelmed by the response and delighted to see people envisioning their future homes at Ace Ayodhya. A simple ritual of offering prayers to Lord Ram and seeking His blessings while booking a home was warmly received, creating an atmosphere of positivity and serenity throughout the event.

The possession handover ceremony of Ace Abode was equally special. While it marked a sense of achievement for our customers, it was also an emotional moment for us as we handed over a piece of our hearts.

Ace Abode, a community of over 650 homes in Kiwale near Ravet, continues to be admired for its colonial-inspired architecture since its launch in 2022.

To date, we have handed over more than 450 apartments and witnessed the project evolve into a thriving community of like-minded residents.

At Jhamtani, nothing makes us prouder than revisiting our projects and seeing families living in comfort, happiness and harmony.

Such milestones are possible only through the alignment and dedication of our teams. To ensure we remain focused on a common vision, we begin every financial year with Roadmap Day.

This year, our Core Team and Senior Management Team came together at the scenic Garud Machi, Tamhini ghat for strategic discussions, introspection and team bonding. The day combined meaningful conversations with energetic outdoor activities, strengthening our commitment to the year ahead.

Every year teaches us something new, every challenge makes us stronger, and every milestone inspires us to aim higher. This year, our guiding theme is "Quality First" – in construction, execution, relationships and mindset.

We remain deeply grateful to our JTribe for their trust and support, which continue to help us grow stronger with every passing year.

Thanks,

Meenakshi Jhamtani

Ace Ayodhya – The Launch That Started My Jhamtani Journey

The first and most memorable experience I had after starting my journey at Jhamtani was the launch of the Ace Ayodhya project. It was not just a project for me, but a milestone in my career, an opportunity to learn new things and a beautiful journey filled with unforgettable memories. Being a part of such a culturally and spiritually significant project during its very first launch was truly inspiring for me.

Every day during the launch of Ace Ayodhya brought new energy, new challenges and new learnings. The regular site updates, planning meetings, execution process, marketing activities and interactions with customers allowed me to experience the professionalism of the real estate sector firsthand. The pre-launch rush, team coordination, attention to every detail and the dedication everyone showed to make the project successful became a very special experience for me.

What made this launch even more unique was the spiritual and cultural atmosphere created throughout the launch days. Customers and visitors were welcomed with a sense of warmth, faith and tradition. One of the most memorable elements was the opportunity for clients to seek blessings of Ram Mandir through Guruji within the sales office itself, creating a deeply emotional and divine experience. The traditional gamcha worn during the launch activities added a beautiful cultural touch and reflected the roots and identity of Ayodhya. As a gesture of gratitude and remembrance, miniature replicas of the Ram Mandir were gifted to booking clients along with felicitation, which made the entire experience even more meaningful and memorable for them.

A very special identity of Ace Ayodhya is the beautiful Ram Temple built within the project. The faith connected to the holy land of Ram Mandir and the reflection of Indian culture can truly be experienced in this project. The temple created a strong emotional connection among customers and gave Ace Ayodhya a unique cultural identity. The project beautifully blends spirituality, culture and modern lifestyle together.

The most beautiful part of this entire journey was the team bonding and the positive energy shared among everyone. The enthusiasm and dedication of the team could be felt during every event, site visit and launch activity. The spirit of supporting each other and completing the work even in challenging situations taught me a lot. This project helped me understand the true importance of teamwork, responsibility, communication and execution.

The positive response I received from customers during the launch events, the happiness on their faces and the faith they showed in the project will always remain inspiring moments for me. This project not only gave me professional experience, but also gave me confidence, responsibility and the motivation to work on a bigger scale.

Even today, Ace Ayodhya is not just my first launch, but an emotional and proud memory in my career. The experiences, achievements, team moments and learnings gained from this project will continue to inspire me throughout my future journey. Ace Ayodhya – a confluence of faith, culture, teamwork and excellence – is an unforgettable chapter in my professional life that will always remain close to my heart.

Customer's Voices Ace Ayodhya Launch

Our experience of purchasing an under-construction home at Ace Ayodhya has been truly wonderful. Right from our first visit, the project made a lasting impression on us. The sales team was extremely professional and knowledgeable throughout the entire journey. They patiently addressed all our questions, provided complete clarity on every aspect of the project.

The sales office is well-maintained, organized, and created a positive first impression. The

One of the biggest strengths of Ace Ayodhya is its excellent location, offering great connectivity and easy access to essential facilities. The thoughtful planning, modern amenities make this project attractive.

The Perfect Balance of Comfort and Spirituality

Booking our dream home at Ace Ayodhya by Jhamtani Builders marks a truly special milestone in our lives. A home is much more than just four walls—it is a place where memories are created, dreams take shape, and families grow together. From our very first visit, we were impressed by the project's thoughtful planning, quality construction, modern amenities, and the sense of community it offers.

What makes Ace Ayodhya even more special is the holistic and positive environment it creates. True to its name, the inclusion of the beautifully designed Ram Mandir within the project adds a unique spiritual dimension and a sense of peace. It brings together modern living and timeless values, creating an atmosphere that feels both uplifting and welcoming for families.

The home-buying journey can often feel overwhelming, but the Jhamtani Builders team made the entire experience smooth, transparent, and enjoyable. Their professionalism and customer-focused approach gave us confidence at every step. We are excited to begin this new chapter and look forward to creating countless happy memories in our new home at Ace Ayodhya. We are grateful to everyone involved and proud to be a part of this wonderful community.

Warm regards,

Turning Data Into Decisions: How Our Live Booking Dashboard Powered a Successful Launch Event

At our recent launch event, speed, accuracy, and visibility were critical. With multiple teams handling customer interactions, bookings, walk-ins, and inventory discussions simultaneously, we needed a system that could provide real-time insights and support quick decision-making on the ground.

To make this possible, our team developed a dynamic live dashboard using Google Sheets – a centralized performance tracker designed specifically for the event. What started as a simple monitoring tool quickly became the operational command center of the launch.

Real-Time Visibility Across the Event

The dashboard enabled leadership and sales teams to monitor every important metric in real time, including:

- Total customer footfall and walk-ins
- Booking conversions
- Day-wise sales performance
- Sales manager rankings and productivity
- Unit-wise booking status
- Source-wise lead performance
- Cancellation tracking and APR analysis

With live updates happening throughout the day, teams could instantly identify high-performing channels, track momentum, and respond proactively wherever support was needed.

The system also provided a day-wise breakdown of booking activity, helping management evaluate peak engagement periods and customer trends during the launch.

Performance Tracking That Motivated Teams

One of the most impactful sections of the dashboard was the Sales Manager Performance Leaderboard. This live ranking system helped create healthy competition among teams while giving management clear visibility into:

- Booking conversions
- Customer handling efficiency
- Walk-in to booking ratios
- Token management
- Individual sales contributions

By making performance transparent and measurable, the dashboard helped maintain high energy and accountability throughout the event.

Smarter Decisions Through Data

Beyond reporting numbers, the dashboard played a key role in operational decision-making. Teams were able to:

- Identify underperforming channels instantly
- Monitor booking trends in real time
- Track inventory movement by unit type
- Analyze fresh vs repeat bookings
- Manage cancellations efficiently

This level of visibility reduced delays in reporting and eliminated the dependency on manual consolidation from multiple teams.

A Simple Tool with Powerful Impact

What made this initiative particularly successful was its simplicity. Built entirely on Google Sheets, the dashboard was:

- Easy to access across teams
- Live and collaborative
- Cost-effective
- Quick to deploy and customize

- Flexible enough to adapt during the event

The project demonstrated how the right use of digital tools can significantly improve coordination, transparency, and performance during high-volume sales events.

Looking Ahead

The success of this dashboard has encouraged us to further strengthen our data-driven approach for future launches and campaigns. By combining operational execution with live analytics, we are creating smarter systems that empower teams and enhance customer experiences.

This initiative stands as a great example of how innovation does not always require complex technology – sometimes, the most effective solutions come from understanding the problem clearly and building tools that teams can use efficiently in real time.

A Home Built on Trust

It has been more than three years since our association with the Jhamtani Group began, and over this journey we have witnessed every stage of development—from the laying of the very first stone to the beautiful building that stands today. Watching this transformation unfold firsthand has been truly remarkable.

A heartfelt thank you to the Sales, CRM, and Finance teams for their continuous support throughout the entire process. On 17th May 2026, we were blessed to finally receive our dream home—a truly memorable milestone for our family.

The Graha Shanti Puja was conducted in a systematic and well-organized manner. We especially appreciated the way the Pujari explained the significance of the ceremony, helping everyone understand its purpose: inviting peace, prosperity, and positive energy, and removing obstacles from life. The entire event was planned and carried out smoothly, creating a warm and spiritual atmosphere. A special mention must go to the delicious food served at the end, enjoyed by all and a wonderful close to the celebration.

Above all, none of this would have been possible without the vision, dedication, and effort of the entire Jhamtani Group team. Creating a home is not merely about constructing a building—it is about building trust, nurturing relationships, and fulfilling the dreams of countless families. Thank you for delivering not just a property, but a place we can truly call home.

We wish the entire Jhamtani Group team continued success, growth, and many more milestones in the years ahead. Thank you to everyone who made this journey and celebration so special.

Quality First – Building the Next Chapter at Jhamtani

Set against the scenic backdrop of Garud Machi, this year's Roadmap & AOP Day created the perfect environment for reflection, alignment and team bonding at Jhamtani – a brand that continues to build its identity around trust, quality and long-term customer value.

At Jhamtani, every year marks a new milestone in our journey – but this year's Roadmap & AOP Day felt particularly significant, and it happened to be my first one with the Group. Centered around the theme "Quality First", the day was designed not only to review plans and targets, but to reinforce the philosophy that has become deeply associated with the Jhamtani brand – delivering quality not just in construction, but in planning, execution, customer experience and organizational culture.

The event began with an energizing start over breakfast, followed by a reflection on the achievements, learnings and growth of FY 25-26. As the organization continues to grow across projects and customer segments, the emphasis remained clear: every milestone achieved by Jhamtani must continue to stand on the foundation of consistency, reliability and quality-driven execution.

The sessions by Ms. Meenakshi Jhamtani and Mr. Anup Jhamtani set the tone for the day by sharing where Jhamtani is headed next and what will define the company's future growth. Their address strongly emphasized that Jhamtani has been built over years through customer trust, attention to detail and the collective efforts of every team member. They reiterated that maintaining quality standards – whether on-site, in systems, in communication or in customer relationships – will remain central to the organization's identity as it scales further.

One of the strongest aspects of the Roadmap Day was the active participation from every department. Teams from Sales, Construction, Liaison & Approvals, CRM, Branding & Marketing, HAS & Safety, Design & Planning, Finance, ERP & MIS, Legal and People shared their department-wise goals, operational challenges and execution strategies for the year ahead.

What stood out throughout the discussions was the understanding that quality is not limited to physical construction alone. At Jhamtani, quality also means timely communication, stronger processes, better coordination, safer sites, cleaner systems and a more seamless customer journey. Every department demonstrated how its role contributes toward strengthening the overall customer experience and protecting the reputation of the brand.

Several important priorities emerged during the sessions:

- Delivering superior construction quality and execution standards
- Strengthening process-driven systems and accountability
- Improving customer communication and response timelines
- Enhancing coordination between departments for smoother delivery
- Building safer, cleaner and more organized project environments
- Using technology and MIS systems for better operational control
- Creating a culture of ownership and continuous improvement across teams

The second half of the day brought a refreshing shift in energy. The trainer's session on Kaizen culture by Mr. Ajit Yadav encouraged everyone to think beyond day-to-day operations and focus on leadership, mindset and continuous self-improvement — values that are equally important in building a strong organization.

Award of the Year- a proud moment for the organization was the recognition of Mr. Dayal Jeswani, who received an award for his valuable contribution to the company's growth and his continued commitment toward strengthening the vision of the organisation.

The team-building activities led by Mr. Vinod Sutar brought enthusiasm, collaboration and positive energy to the day, strengthening relationships between teams outside the regular work environment. These moments reflected what truly defines the culture at Jhamtani — a professionally driven organization that continues to value people, teamwork and collective growth.

As the day concluded, there was a strong sense of clarity, motivation and alignment across the organization. More than an annual roadmap exercise, the event became a reminder that the future of Jhamtani will continue to be shaped by its commitment to quality, customer trust and execution excellence.

CORE HIGHLIGHTS

Things you learn on a road trip to Leh-Ladakh that teach you so much about life and business:

- It's always one down and four up — just like the gears on a bike. Most of the journey happens in 2nd, 3rd and 4th gear where life moves smoothly... but sometimes you need to slow down, balance, and climb carefully in first gear too.
- The most beautiful destinations often have the toughest roads leading to them.
- “Road to success is under construction” — the famous signs by BRO (Border Roads Organisation) perfectly define life and entrepreneurship. Growth is always a work in progress.
- The most breathtaking places also come with the harshest weather. Beauty and discomfort often coexist.

- Just like in a group ride, in business and life too, always have: a leader / mentor who has travelled the path before, and a backup system or safety net for emergencies.
- Always be properly geared up for the worst. Bad times never arrive with prior notice.
- Once you start the journey, quitting midway is rarely an option. You keep moving forward — one kilometre at a time.
- Every successful ride needs the right tools, systems and fuel. In business, that fuel is cash flow, people, projects and processes.

- Things rarely go exactly according to plan. The route may change, weather may turn, obstacles may appear — but the destination and purpose must remain constant.
- And finally... every bit of pain, exhaustion, uncertainty and struggle feels worth it when you reach the destination safe, stronger and fulfilled.

Leh-Ladakh is not just a road trip. It's a masterclass in resilience, preparation, teamwork, patience and perspective.

It's Okay to not have a plan

While presenting on the topic "It's Okay to Not Have a Plan," I felt genuinely excited because presentations have always been something I enjoyed since my college days.

I chose this topic because many employees in our organization come from different backgrounds like BTech, IT, and Engineering, but eventually found themselves in real estate. That made this topic very relatable for everyone.

Before presenting, I was confident but also nervous about one thing, what if people didn't engage or respond to my presentation. Since this task was given to me by Meenakshi Ma'am, I wanted to do it perfectly.

But while presenting, I saw everyone enjoying and connecting with the topic. People were actively engaging during the session, which made me feel more comfortable and confident while speaking. The appreciation I received after the presentation boosted my confidence even more and motivated me to keep improving myself.

In today's world, we are constantly asked about our plans — career plans, life plans, future goals, five-year visions. Sometimes it feels like everyone around us has everything figured out while we are still trying to understand ourselves.

But the truth is, it's completely okay to not have a plan all the time.

Life is not a straight road. Some people discover their passion early, while others take time, experience failures, change directions, and eventually find what truly makes them happy. Not having a fixed plan does not mean you are lost.

Sometimes it simply means you are exploring, learning, and growing.

There is a lot of pressure to always be productive and certain about the future. However, some of the best opportunities in life come unexpectedly. A random conversation, a new experience, or even a failure can completely change our path for the better.

Instead of stressing about having every step planned, focus on moving forward one step at a time. Learn new things, stay curious, take chances, and trust yourself. Growth does not always happen according to a schedule.

Having goals is important, but giving yourself the freedom to evolve is equally important. Sometimes, not having a plan is where real discovery begins.

You risk Everything"

Quiet Quitting

77% of Your Team Has Already Left. They Just Haven't Told You Yet.

Quiet quitting isn't a Gen Z buzzword. It's what happens when capable people decide the cost of caring is higher than the return.

There's someone on your team right now who used to be different. They used to stay on calls after they ended, not because they had to, but because they were still thinking about the problem. At some point, something changed. Not in a single moment. More like a slow dimming. They're still there, still delivering, still replying. But the initiative is gone.

It never starts with a decision. Their idea gets passed over in a meeting, not shot down, just not picked up. They'd been thinking about it for two weeks. They quietly decide not to think as hard about the next one. They put in a brutal fortnight on a project. It ships well. Nobody says a word. Something they built gets presented by someone else. Their name isn't mentioned. Something small breaks that day.

By the time the withdrawal is visible, it's already been going on for a long time. The absence of aliveness is invisible precisely because the presence of basic function remains.

Gallup's 2023 State of the Global Workplace report found that just 23% of employees worldwide are fully engaged at work. 77 out of every 100 people in your organization are somewhere between "doing the minimum" and "actively undermining the team."

In most cases of quiet quitting, the direct manager is a contributing factor, not through cruelty, but through small failures of attention.

The standard move of scheduling a 1:1 mostly fails. Someone who has been quietly withdrawing has already learned that honesty is risky. The system has trained them to give safe answers to open questions.

Trust is rebuilt through patterns, not conversations. Get specific with acknowledgement, "The way you reframed that client's brief on Tuesday, that unlocked the whole conversation", tells someone they were seen. Get curious about the person, not just the output. What do they find energising? What are they trying to build, and does their current work give them any of that?

"The deepest principle in human nature is the craving to be appreciated.", William James Quiet quitting is not a resignation. It is a signal. The question is only whether you've built the kind of place where people still feel it's worth sending.

Intern

You Don't Have to Be Confident. Just Be Consistent.

Picture this: You are sitting in the office on a regular day when you find out it is your turn to present at Thoughtful Tuesday. One topic. Twenty minutes. A room full of colleagues and leadership.

No pressure, right?

That moment left me with one question: What is something I genuinely believe in, not just something that sounds good on a slide?

And honestly, the answer came from my own experience here. Because the one thing I kept noticing was this: the people who grew were not always the most confident. They were the most consistent. So the topic chose itself.

Tuesday morning surprised me. People leaned in, the conversation felt real, and together we unpacked why confidence is misunderstood and why showing up repeatedly, even without feeling ready, is the most underrated skill any of us can build.

Some ideas that came through strongly:

- Confidence is a byproduct, not a starting point
- Consistency is a behaviour always within your control
- Showing up on the hard days is where the habit actually forms
- Progress compounds quietly before it becomes visible

One idea stood out above all: you do not need to feel ready to begin. Confidence shows up after the action, not before. I walked into this internship without feeling fully prepared, but I kept showing up, kept asking questions, kept going. That experience made this topic personal, not just theoretical.

A sincere thank you to the HR team and management for creating Thoughtful Tuesday and for building a culture where real conversations happen.

Here is to showing up before you feel ready and choosing consistency over waiting for the perfect moment. Because when we keep showing up, we grow together.

Mr. Varadraj Thaker

Communication: The Most Underrated Corporate Skill

As part of our Thoughtful Tuesday initiative, I got the opportunity to present on a topic that I strongly believe plays a major role in every workplace – communication. While technical knowledge, experience, and performance are important, effective communication is what truly connects people, builds understanding, and helps teams work smoothly together.

During the preparation of this presentation, I realized that many workplace challenges are not caused because people lack talent or dedication, but because messages are misunderstood, assumptions are made, or expectations are not communicated clearly. Simple gaps like unclear instructions, delayed responses, or poor listening can often lead to confusion, conflicts, and reduced productivity.

Through this session, I wanted to highlight how clear and thoughtful communication can positively impact teamwork, leadership, and overall workplace culture. Communication is not only about speaking confidently; it is also about listening actively, understanding different perspectives, and ensuring that the message is received in the right way. Good communication creates trust within teams, strengthens professional relationships, and helps people work with better clarity and alignment.

I also shared examples of inspiring leaders like Steve Jobs and Ratan Tata, who are known not only for their achievements but also for the way they communicated with people. Steve Jobs had the ability to simplify complex ideas and present them in a way that inspired audiences across the world. On the other hand, Ratan Tata showed how communication with empathy, humility, and compassion can leave a lasting impact, especially during difficult situations. These examples helped us understand that effective communication is not limited to presentations or meetings – it reflects in our everyday interactions, leadership style, and the way we treat people around us.

One of the most meaningful parts of the session was the interactive discussion where everyone reflected on workplace misunderstandings they had experienced and how better communication could have avoided them. It was interesting to see how relatable this topic was for everyone and how small improvements in communication can create a big difference in team performance and work relationships.

This presentation was a valuable learning experience for me as well. It reminded me that communication is no longer just considered a soft skill – it is an essential business skill. Whether it is collaborating with teammates, handling clients, leading a team, or solving problems, clear communication plays a key role in achieving success.

I am grateful for the opportunity to share my thoughts during Thoughtful Tuesday and thankful to everyone who participated and contributed to the discussion. I truly hope this session encouraged all of us to become better listeners, clearer communicators, and more understanding professionals in our workplace journey.
