Dear Readers,

Bringing this financial year to an end fills us with joy and satisfaction. We, at Jhamtani, are grateful to all of you for helping us achieve a successful financial year. This year, we have recorded 2x growth in our sales turnover compared to the previous financial year.

We launched two of our most loved projects in Mundhwa – 'Jhamtani Elevate' and 'Ace Abundance'. Preleased studio apartments, along with 3 and 4.5 BHK'S under our signature XO series of ultra-premium homes.

This year also marks our highest revenue, highest registrations and highest area constructed. Our sister concerns, Jhamtani Ceracraft and Jhamtani Agencies also had a 1.5x growth in their turnover this year.

Being in real estate for more than 16 years, we have launched 31 projects till date (6.4 million sq ft) and successfully handed over 24 projects on time (4 million sq ft).

Today we stand strong with 225 people working with us. Having our presence across various locations in Pune, we are determined to continue with 7 ongoing projects (2.4 million sq ft) and 4 new projects lined up for launch (4.8 million sq ft), and craft skylines with thoughtfully designed and sustainable projects.

We believe in changing with time for the betterment of the entire ecosystem. With this thought in mind, we introduced 'Shakti Edge', a unique initiative under JTribe.

Shakti Edge is aimed to mentor women employees of our organisation and help them grow into leadership roles. This initiative perfectly aligns with the Viksit Bharat initiative launched by our honourable Prime Minister to promote 'Nari Shakti'. We are proud to introduce you to the participants of this program in this edition of Monthly Buzz.

Activities such as Thoughtful Tuesdays, FunFit Fridays, soft skills training sessions, and Safety Week celebrations keep the spirit high and motivation levels elevated, enabling us to perform at our fullest potential. These initiatives are closely aligned with our core values, which have consistently driven our sustainable growth over the years.

As we step into the new financial year, we are excited to introduce new projects and remain committed to delivering the highest standards of quality. We also look forward to strengthening our bond with the entire JTribe through meaningful community-building initiatives.

Celebrating Women's Day: A Day of Empowerment and Inspiration

The spirit of empowerment and appreciation was truly alive at Jhamtani as International Women's Day was celebrated with great enthusiasm and purpose. The occasion was marked by an engaging self-defence training session, making it both meaningful and memorable for all the women present.

The highlight of the celebration was the felicitation ceremony, graced by the esteemed presence of Anup Sir and Meenakshi Ma'am. Their inspiring words and warm encouragement set the tone for the day, reinforcing the importance of recognizing and uplifting the contributions of women across every sphere. The ceremony celebrated the dedication, strength, and achievements of women within the organization, fostering a deep sense of pride and motivation.

Aligned with this year's theme, "Give to Gain," a Krav Maga self-defence training session was organized, offering an empowering platform for women. This hands-on workshop focused on practical techniques to enhance personal safety and build confidence. Participants actively engaged in the session, gaining not just physical skills but also mental preparedness and heightened awareness.

The combination of recognition and skill-building made the celebration truly impactful. While the felicitation honored accomplishments, the self-defence training equipped participants with practical tools for everyday confidence and safety.

The Women's Day celebration was not just an event—it was a strong reflection of the organization's commitment to fostering a safe, respectful, and empowering environment for women. It reinforced the belief that when women are supported and empowered, they thrive—and so does the entire community.

Such initiatives continue to inspire and pave the way for a more inclusive and confident future.

Glad to be a part of JTribе!

Shakti Edge: Where Potential Meets Leadership

This year, Women's Day held a deeper meaning for us. While the construction and real estate industry has traditionally seen limited female representation, the narrative is steadily evolving. Women today are not just supporting growth from the sidelines—they are actively shaping industries, taking on leadership roles, and driving meaningful change.

At Jhamtani, this shift is already in motion, with women constituting 23% of our workforce - a reflection of our commitment to building a more inclusive and balanced organisation.

Taking this vision forward, we introduced 'Shakti Edge' - a dedicated mentorship program for women at Jhamtani, under the JTribe initiative.

Shakti Edge is designed to nurture, guide, and elevate women professionals within the organisation. Over the next six months, the selected participants will undergo structured mentorship, leadership development, and skill-building sessions aimed at accelerating both their personal and professional growth. The program focuses on building confidence, strengthening decision-making abilities, and preparing participants to take on larger leadership roles.

Following a detailed assessment process, six women were selected for this inaugural cohort, representing diverse functions across the organisation, including Sanjot Shriram and Anuja Sukre from Sales, Eshika Patil from Marketing, Vishakha Mali from Accounts, Shruti Dangi from Administration and me - bringing together varied perspectives and strengths into one transformative journey.

We are grateful and look forward to witnessing the growth as we evolve into confident leaders within the organisation.

As we embark on this journey together, Shakti Edge stands as a meaningful step towards building a more inclusive, empowered, and future-ready organisation, where every individual has the opportunity to lead, grow, and thrive.

The Gentleman's Cheat Codes

This Women's Day, instead of speaking only about women, we chose to reflect on the role men play in creating a culture of respect, dignity, and safety.

During a special session for the team,

Mr. Anup Jhamtani, our managing director shared a thoughtful perspective of timeless principles that define what it truly means to be a gentleman in today's world.

Here are the principles shared during the session:

1. A gentleman understands that flowers and jewellery are to women what gadgets and automobiles are to men. He makes sure to celebrate and appreciate the women in his life with meaningful gestures.
2. A gentleman dresses sharp, grooms well, and carries himself with confidence. Simply taking care of his appearance places him among the top tier of men who value self-respect.
3. He pulls the door, offers the seat, lifts the bag. He is strong yet humble — always ready to protect and provide.
4. A gentleman knows his son may not always follow what he says, but will surely imitate what he does.
5. He does not tell his sons that men should not cry. Instead, he teaches them never to be the reason someone else — especially a woman — cries.
6. A gentleman ensures that a woman reaches home safely, always walking or driving her right to her doorstep.
7. He steps forward to pay the bill — not as an act of patriarchy, but as a gesture of chivalry.

8. He chooses his words carefully, communicating with courtesy and respect.

9. A gentleman gives women the first chance for anything good and stands forward in moments of danger.

10. He never raises his voice to show superiority. Instead, he focuses on improving his argument and knows when to step back — even if he believes he is right.

11. He is kind to children, protective of the weak, respectful to everyone, and attentive to the elderly.

12. A gentleman never steps out without being properly groomed and prepared — carrying his watch, wallet, pen, and handkerchief.

13. A gentleman never kisses and tells.

14. He avoids gossip and instead talks about ideas, health, money, and adventures.

15. His wallet, bag, desk, and wardrobe remain well organized — reflecting the discipline he carries in life.

The session served as a reminder that creating a respectful and supportive environment for women begins with the everyday actions of men. Because true gentlemanliness is not about grand declarations — it is about consistent character.

Soft Skills Training

A soft skills training session is currently being conducted by a professional trainer, which is a commendable initiative by the company to strengthen the capabilities of the presales team. It reflects a forward-thinking approach toward building a more confident, skilled, and client-focused workforce.

As employees, we truly appreciate management's efforts toward our continuous learning and skill development. Such initiatives not only enhance our day-to-day performance but also motivate us to grow both personally and professionally within the organization.

Soft skills such as effective communication, active listening, confidence, and relationship-building play a crucial role in presales, where the first impression often influences a client's decision. This training is enabling team members to refine their interpersonal abilities, engage with clients more confidently, and present solutions with greater clarity, relevance, and impact.

Additionally, the sessions are helping us better understand client needs, handle objections more efficiently, and build stronger, long-term relationships. These are essential skills that directly contribute to improved client satisfaction and trust.

Overall, this initiative will not only enhance individual performance but also lead to better client engagement, improved conversion rates, and stronger business outcomes. It is indeed a valuable step toward fostering professional growth and driving overall organizational success.

A Blockbuster End to the Year!

What better way to wrap up an incredible year than with a full-house team outing at the movies! The Jhamtani team came together for Dhurandhar 2: Revenge, and it turned out to be the perfect mix of entertainment, energy, and team spirit.

Dhurandhar 2: Revenge brought with it all the elements of a complete entertainer—high-octane action, gripping moments, dramatic twists, and powerful dialogues that kept everyone hooked till the very end. From whistle-worthy scenes to unexpected turns, the film had the entire theatre reacting in sync—cheering, laughing, and thoroughly enjoying every moment.

But what truly made the evening special was not just the movie, but the people watching it together.

In that theatre, there were no titles, no hierarchies—just one unified JTribe. Directors, managers, and team members sat side by side, sharing popcorn, reactions, and laughter. It was a rare and refreshing experience where everyone connected beyond roles and responsibilities.

The energy was contagious—every punchline landed better, every action scene felt bigger, and every moment was amplified because it was experienced together. These are the moments that go beyond work and build real connections.

As the credits rolled, it wasn't just the end of a movie—it felt like the perfect closing scene to a successful year. A year filled with growth, achievements, and teamwork, wrapped up in the most memorable way possible.

We truly ended the year with a bang—and just like the movie's title, with a sense of power, passion, and a little bit of "revenge" on all the challenges we conquered this year.

Here's to stronger bonds, bigger celebrations, and many more blockbuster moments together!

Learning to Lead Time: A Thoughtful Tuesday Experience

As part of our Thoughtful Tuesday initiative at *Jhamtani Group, I got the opportunity to present on the topic "Time Management." It was a great experience, and I sincerely thank the management for giving me this opportunity to speak in Thoughtful Tuesday.

Time management is very important in our daily life. We all have the same 24 hours, but how we use them makes a big difference. Proper time management helps us reduce stress, stay organized, and focus on important tasks rather than wasting time on less important activities.

During my session, I shared simple techniques like planning the day in advance, setting priorities, and avoiding distractions. I also spoke about the Eisenhower Matrix, which helps in deciding what is urgent and important so that we can work more efficiently.

Personally, I have seen that when I manage my time properly, I can complete my work on time, stay more productive, and maintain a better balance between work and personal life.

I felt very confident and happy while conducting this session. It was a great learning experience for me, and I truly enjoyed interacting with the team.

Once again, thank you for giving me this opportunity.

My Experience on Thoughtful Tuesday

To begin with, I honestly thought this would turn out to be a slightly boring session. Also, the audience wasn't unfamiliar, they were my own colleagues, people I'll be working closely with, especially since I've recently joined as Vice President of the Residential Business Unit.

The session didn't start perfectly, there were a few technical glitches (as always happens), but we moved past them quickly. Since it was around 10:30 AM — that usual rush hour when everyone is settling into work, I decided to begin with a small energizer.

We played a song and did a simple rhythmic clapping activity, and surprisingly, it turned out to be a lot of fun! It really lifted the energy in the room, and I could see people genuinely enjoying it (at least I hope I read that right!).

The topic I chose for the session was "Self-Enquiry", inspired by the teachings of Ramana Maharshi.

What truly stayed with me is a simple yet powerful realization, most of our stress doesn't come from situations, but from how we interpret them in our minds.

I began noticing how quickly we react to thoughts, frustration, worry, assumptions almost automatically. The idea of self-enquiry introduces a pause in that process. Just asking, "To whom is this thought arising?" and then "Who is this me?" creates a subtle but meaningful shift. You move from reacting to observing.

One practical takeaway was the 3-second pause, in moments of stress or disagreement, just stopping, taking a breath, and becoming aware of your thoughts can completely change your response.

For me, the biggest learning is this: clarity doesn't come from reacting faster, but from becoming more aware.

That small pause between stimulus and response can lead to better decisions and calmer leadership.

I'm truly grateful to all my colleagues who actively participated. What made it even more meaningful was that after the session, around 6-8 people came up to me and shared their appreciation, that's when I felt there was real value and impact created.

Overall, it was a fulfilling experience, and definitely not as "boring" as I had imagined

My First Corporate Speech Experience

Standing in front of a room full of energetic colleagues, I realized something — this wasn't just a presentation. It was a moment of personal breakthrough. Delivering my first corporate speech on "Trust – An Invisible Currency" was both exciting and deeply humbling.

When I chose this topic, I knew I was stepping into something powerful yet intangible. Unlike numbers, targets, or strategies that we deal with every day, trust cannot be measured on spreadsheets. Yet, it influences every decision, every relationship, and every success story within an organization.

As I began the session, I could feel a mix of nervousness and adrenaline. But as I started sharing my thoughts, something shifted. The room became more engaged, conversations started flowing, and I realized — trust was not just the topic of my speech, it was the bridge connecting me to my audience.

I spoke about how trust works like currency:

- It is earned over time
- It can be invested in relationships
- It compounds with consistency
- And once lost, it is extremely difficult to rebuild

What made this experience truly special was not just speaking, but the reactions that followed. Colleagues shared their perspectives, related personal experiences, and added depth to the conversation. It became less of a speech and more of a shared reflection.

This session also taught me something about myself. Stepping out of my comfort zone, articulating my thoughts, and being vulnerable in front of a professional audience gave me a new sense of confidence. It reminded me that growth doesn't happen in silence — it happens when we choose to express, connect, and contribute.

In the corporate world, we often focus on visible metrics — revenue, growth, performance. But this experience reinforced my belief that the strongest organizations are built on invisible foundations like trust, respect, and credibility.

As I walked away from that session, I didn't just feel relieved — I felt enriched. Because in sharing my thoughts on trust, I unknowingly built more of it.

And perhaps that's the true power of this invisible currency.

More Than a Session - A Moment of Realization

Today's Thoughtful Tuesday session turned into a moment of honest reflection for me as I spoke about the theme — “Fail, Learn, and Rise Again.”

I shared an experience from my professional journey where I had taken complete ownership of a task, feeling confident about the outcome. But things didn't go as expected. The results fell short, and I remember feeling a mix of disappointment and self-doubt. For a while, I kept replaying the situation in my head, questioning what went wrong.

What this session made me realize, as I spoke about it, is how important that phase was.

Instead of letting that failure define me, I chose to step back and reflect. I broke down the situation, understood where my approach lacked, and actively sought feedback from my seniors and teammates. That shift—from reacting emotionally to responding thoughtfully—changed everything.

With those learnings, I gradually rebuilt my confidence. I began taking on new responsibilities, this time with sharper clarity, better preparation, and a more grounded mindset.

Sharing this today reminded me that failure isn't the opposite of success—it's a part of it. In fact, some of the most valuable lessons come only when things don't go as planned.

Thoughtful Tuesday, for me, became more than just a session. It became a pause—a chance to acknowledge growth, embrace imperfections, and remind myself that every setback carries the potential to shape a stronger comeback.

Because in the end, we don't just fail—we learn, evolve, and rise again.
