Editor's Note

Dear Readers,

August has been a month of moments that reminded us what it truly means to build a brand with purpose.

The defining moment of the month was the unveiling of Ranveer Singh as the Brand Ambassador of Jhamtani – marking the beginning of an exciting new chapter for the brand. The association comes from a shared belief in what it takes to build something that lasts. Energy, dedication, curiosity and versatility are qualities that define Ranveer's journey, and they strongly resonate with the way we see ourselves at Jhamtani. His constant willingness to explore, evolve and take on something new reflects our own spirit of being better than yesterday.

For us, Ranveer is not simply the face of the brand. He represents an attitude - the energy to dream bigger, the curiosity to keep learning, the versatility to evolve and the dedication to give every endeavour his best. These are qualities we value deeply as we continue to grow, innovate and create a positive impact through everything we do. The launch at JW Marriott, Pune brought together our media fraternity, industry peers, influencers and business partners, making it much more than a brand announcement. It was a celebration of the journey so far and a glimpse into the chapter that lies ahead. A new face. A new chapter. The same promise.

This month also took us beyond Pune, with the CREDAI Pune Hyderabad Study Tour, offering valuable insights into technology, capital efficiency, sales, execution and building smarter systems. Closer home, our Thoughtful Tuesday sessions brought our refreshed values to life – Customer Happiness, Better Than Yesterday, Think Long Term, and Creating a Positive Impact on Every Life We Touch.

Our Annual Team Picnic was another reminder that behind every milestone is a team that learns, collaborates, celebrates and grows together. From brand to business, learning to culture, and ambition to execution, this edition captures a month of movement at Jhamtani.

As we step into this new chapter, one thing remains unchanged:

The Name Is A Promise.

Happy Reading!

From a Thought Around the Table to a Campaign

Some campaigns are launched. The memorable ones are built.

Seven–eight months ago, what would eventually become a major campaign for Jhamtani began as a simple thought around a table:

What if Ranveer Singh became the face of Jhamtani?

At that point, it was only an idea. Turning it into reality required much more than securing a celebrity partnership. It required a clear vision, conviction, collaboration and months of detailed planning.

The journey began with shaping the initial thought and building a strong case for the talent conversation. From there, the focus shifted to developing the campaign narrative, defining the creative direction and bringing together the right people and partners to execute the vision.

Over the months that followed, every detail came under scrutiny.

The creative. The script. Styling. Looks. Locations. Visual language. Production. Execution.

Ideas were challenged, refined and, at times, reworked. But the objective remained constant: to create a campaign that felt worthy of the ambition behind the brand.

Then came the shoot day.

There is a unique satisfaction in standing on a set and watching months of conversations, decisions and preparation finally come together in front of you. What once existed as an idea on paper becomes tangible—the people, the performances, the visuals and the brand all coming together in a single frame.

But the shoot was only one milestone.

The Grand Reveal

The next challenge was to ensure that the campaign did not simply launch—it arrived with impact.

The grand reveal marked the transition from months of preparation to a campaign that could be experienced by audiences at scale. The launch generated strong media interest and gave the campaign the visibility needed to establish itself beyond the initial reveal.

From there, the campaign moved across an integrated ecosystem of media.

Digital created reach and engagement. PR helped build the larger narrative and generate sustained media conversations. OOH and Digital OOH brought the campaign into the physical environment, creating high-visibility brand presence across key touchpoints. Social and digital amplification further extended the campaign, ensuring that the momentum continued well beyond the launch.

The result was a campaign that didn't live in just one medium.

It moved across digital, PR, OOH, Digital OOH and multiple media touchpoints, creating a connected brand experience and keeping the campaign visible across different audiences and environments.

What began as a thought around a table had now become a full-scale brand moment.

More Than a Campaign

There is a difference between creating a campaign and creating a brand moment.

The latter requires every piece to work together: the idea, the talent, the creative, the production, the launch, the PR, the media strategy and the amplification.

Behind every strong campaign is a collective effort. From creative thinking and production to styling, direction, talent management, PR, media and execution, every contribution matters. It takes a team willing to challenge ideas, solve problems and keep pushing until the work feels right.

Equally important is the trust of the people who back the vision. The support and confidence of the Jhamtani leadership created the space to think bigger, push harder and pursue the idea with ambition.

Looking back, the pride is not limited to the final campaign or the visibility it generated. It lies equally in the journey behind it—from that first conversation to the final frame, and then from the final frame to the grand reveal.

Seven-eight months. One vision. Hundreds of decisions. Multiple media touchpoints. One powerful brand moment.

From vision to reality.

And for Jhamtani, this is only the beginning.

A Day That Felt Bigger Than a Brand Launch

Some days are planned on a calendar. Some days stay with you long after the calendar moves on. This was one of those days for Jhamtani and for me. We had one big announcement to make — Ranveer Singh was joining Jhamtani as our Brand Ambassador. But for us, the day was never meant to be just about a celebrity announcement. It was about bringing together the people who have been part of our journey, the people who shape conversations in our industry, and the people who help take a brand beyond its four walls.

So, at JW Marriott, Pune, we brought together media, industry experts, influencers and our business partner community — each for a different experience, but around one common moment. And honestly, the energy in the room was something else. The press conference was designed to feel more like an experience than a conventional brand reveal. There was a flute artist setting the mood as guests arrived. Conversations were happening even before the programme began. Cameras were ready. Media interactions were lined up. And then came the moment everyone was waiting for.

Ranveer Singh...on screen - Jhamtani's Brand Ambassador!

The announcement was followed by conversations around the association — Why Ranveer? Why now? And what does this association mean for Jhamtani? Our Directors also spoke to the media about the thought behind choosing Ranveer and the larger campaign we are building around this partnership. Because the idea was never simply to put a familiar face on a billboard.

It was about finding a personality whose energy, ambition and ability to connect with people felt aligned with the Jhamtani journey. The second half of the day had a completely different energy with our exclusive business partner meeting. This last-minute changes and a team that refuses to settle for ordinary. And when it all comes together in one day, you realise that the launch is only one moment. The story starts after it.

Ranveer Singh may be the newest face of Jhamtani. But the people who were in that room — our employees, partners, media friends, industry peers and extended community — are the people who continue to shape the Jhamtani story. It was a day that reminded us of the scale of the journey ahead. And if the energy of that day was anything to go by...We're just getting started was an evening for our signed partners — the people who stand alongside us on the ground, project after project. We wanted to make the evening feel like a genuine celebration of that relationship. No routine presentations. No typical corporate evening. Just good conversations, good food, laughter and an evening planned exclusively for our partners. And yes, we had stand-up comedy — because sometimes the best way to celebrate partnerships is simply to have a good laugh together. What made the day particularly special was that both experiences, although different, told the same story.

Behind every big announcement are months of conversations, planning, decisions, debates,

Hyderabad Study Tour

What Pune's Real Estate Developers Can Learn from Hyderabad

On 21st and 22nd August 2026, I travelled to Hyderabad with CREDAI Pune, along with 70+ developers, for a two-day study tour.

We visited some remarkable developments and interacted with developers who are approaching real estate very differently — through technology, data, capital efficiency, sales and execution.

One of the most insightful conversations was with Ajitesh Korupolu of ASBL, whose approach to technology and business efficiency left us with plenty to think about.

What stayed with me?

Sales before expansion.

If more than 50% inventory is still unsold, perhaps the next land acquisition shouldn't be the priority. Sell, generate cash flow and then expand.

Cash flow > the last rupee.

When land is funded at 17-18%, waiting months for an additional 1-2% in selling price can be more expensive than closing the transaction today. The question isn't just "What can I sell it for?" but "What is the cost of waiting?"

Land is only the raw material.

One thought that really stayed with me: real estate is a manufacturing business. Land doesn't create value on its own. Product, execution, processes, sales and customer experience do.

Capital could become the new competitive advantage.

The future may not belong to the developer who owns the most land, but to the one who can access and deploy capital efficiently. Strong governance, data and consistent execution will matter increasingly as institutional capital enters the sector.

The customer journey starts long before the site visit.

Customers research developers, projects, reviews, social media, YouTube and podcasts before they ever meet a salesperson. Brand is no longer optional – trust is being built online first.

Technology needs to become the operating system.

From lead conversion and customer behaviour to construction productivity and cost tracking, data can make decision-making significantly sharper. Generative AI could take this further by analysing thousands of customer conversations and identifying patterns humans may miss.

One analogy particularly stayed with me:

Can real estate work like IKEA?

Can we capture the knowledge of our best project managers, standardise what works, learn from what doesn't and turn that knowledge into processes and technology?

One project should make the next project smarter.

And then there was Hyderabad itself.

Large-scale developments, strong infrastructure, impressive execution and the ability to deliver projects at extraordinary scale. We saw a ~17.5-acre My Home Group project with approximately 7.1 million sq. ft. of construction, executed towards completion in less than 48 months.

What impressed me wasn't just the scale.

It was the combination of speed + quality + systems.

My biggest takeaway

The study tour wasn't about copying Hyderabad. It was about asking what Pune can learn from it. Sales. Capital. Technology. Infrastructure. Data. Execution.

The real estate companies of tomorrow may be the ones that think like technology companies, operate with the discipline of manufacturing companies, and treat sales and cash flow as the oxygen of the business.

A big thank you to CREDAI Pune and everyone in Hyderabad who openly shared their experiences.

We came back with more questions than answers – and perhaps that's the best outcome of a study tour.

Celebrating Us – The Jhamtani Team

Keeping Our Traditions Alive, Celebrating Our Identity – The Jhamtani Way

At Jhamtani, we believe that while we work together to create spaces and build communities, it is the people who truly make the journey special. Our Annual Team Picnic is one such occasion where we step away from our daily routines, come together as one team, and simply celebrate Us – The Jhamtani Team.

Keeping up with our traditions and strengthening our identity – The Jhamtani Way, this year's Annual Team Picnic took us to the beautiful Keshar Farmstay Resort, Mulshi, on 27th August 2026.

Surrounded by nature and away from the hustle and bustle of our everyday work environment, the day was filled with laughter, energy, teamwork, and plenty of memorable moments. It was an opportunity for colleagues across teams to interact beyond their regular roles, build stronger connections, and enjoy each other's company.

From fun-filled activities and engaging games to delicious food, music, conversations, and candid moments, every part of the day reflected the wonderful spirit of our Jhamtani family. The activities encouraged everyone to participate, collaborate, cheer for one another, and bring out their playful side.

More than just a day of fun, the picnic reminded us of the importance of team bonding and togetherness. Every individual contributes differently to Jhamtani's journey, and occasions like these give us the opportunity to appreciate those contributions while creating a stronger sense of belonging.

The smiles, laughter, friendly competition, and shared experiences made the day truly special. It was a reminder that behind every project, achievement, and milestone is a team of people who work together, support one another, and continue to grow together.

As we continue our journey ahead, we look forward to keeping our traditions alive, creating new memories, and strengthening the bond that makes us Jhamtani.

Because at Jhamtani, we don't just work together – we celebrate, grow, and succeed together.

Here's to the Jhamtani Spirit!

Here's to Us – The Jhamtani Team!

REITs in India: Making Real Estate More Accessible

Real Estate Investment Trusts (REITs) are changing the way investors participate in real estate. Traditionally, investing in commercial property required substantial capital, extensive due diligence and active involvement in leasing, maintenance and tenant management. REITs offer an alternative: investors can buy units in a professionally managed trust that owns income-generating real estate, giving them exposure to commercial property without directly owning or managing a building.

The structure is broadly similar to a mutual fund, but the underlying assets are real estate. In India, listed REITs are regulated by the Securities and Exchange Board of India (SEBI), with independent trustees, managers, valuers and disclosure requirements intended to strengthen governance and investor confidence. A key feature is the distribution framework, under which at least 90% of the REIT's net distributable cash flows is required to be distributed to unitholders.

For investors, the advantages are practical. REITs lower the entry barrier to institutional-quality commercial real estate, provide portfolio diversification and offer the potential for regular cash distributions. Investors also benefit from professional asset management and, because listed REIT units trade on stock exchanges, a level of liquidity and price transparency that direct property ownership does not ordinarily provide. At the same time, REITs should not be viewed as fixed-income products. Unit prices can fluctuate with interest rates, market sentiment, occupancy, rental growth and the performance of the underlying properties.

There are other risks to consider as well. A REIT's income depends on the quality and diversification of its assets, tenants and leases. Concentration in a particular city or asset class can increase sensitivity to local market conditions. Distributions may also have different tax implications depending on their nature, making it important for investors to understand the tax disclosures of the specific REIT. Also like other market-linked investments, REITs do not offer guaranteed returns.

India's REIT market has now developed considerably from its beginnings. The first Indian REIT was listed in 2019, and there are now six publicly listed REITs. According to the Indian REITs Association, as of Q1 FY27 these REITs collectively cover more than 21.4 crore sq. ft. across India's commercial and retail markets, with gross assets under management exceeding ₹3.17 lakh crore and combined market capitalisation of more than ₹2.17 lakh crore. The sector has also attracted more than 4.85 lakh unitholders and distributed ₹3,136 crore during Q1 FY27 alone. Since inception, cumulative distributions have exceeded ₹34,800 crore.

The next phase of growth could be significant. India has a substantial base of institutional - quality commercial real estate that could potentially be brought within REIT structures as the market develops. Continued demand from technology and BFSI companies, together with the growing presence of Global Capability Centres, is supporting demand for high-quality office assets.

At the same time, increasing investor participation and the entry of newer organisations into the REIT space could broaden the market further.

The opportunity may also gradually extend into emerging asset classes. Data centres, for instance, are becoming an increasingly important component of India's digital infrastructure, with REITs already beginning to build exposure to the segment. As demand for AI, cloud computing and digital services grows, data centres could become an increasingly relevant component of the real estate investment landscape.

Ultimately, the significance of REITs extends beyond their role as an investment product. They represent a broader transition in Indian real estate, from individual ownership towards professionally managed, transparent and institutionally backed assets. As participation expands, new organisations enter the market and more real estate assets become suitable for such structures. In that sense, the future of REITs is not simply about creating another investment avenue; it is about making a larger part of India's real estate economy more accessible, organised and investment-ready.

Behind the Scenes: The Day We Captured the Jhamtani Promise

When our marketing team first told me we were shooting a film about Promise, I thought it would be a quick, simple day in front of the camera. A few lines, a nice outfit, and a quick wrap. (I even secretly practiced my best movie-star wave in the mirror).

I was wrong.

What followed was a full day of Light, Camera, Action, moving across different locations, dealing with blinding studio lights, adjusting camera angles, and doing plenty of retakes. (Pro tip: If you ever want to forget your own name, just have a director yell "Take 14!" at you). But as the hours passed, I realized this wasn't just a regular video shoot. It was a clear reminder of what our company stands for.

Every core member of our team was asked to speak from the heart on two simple things:

- What does a promise mean for Jhamtani?
- How do we make sure we keep it?

Standing there and listening to everyone talk was the best part of the day—even if half of us kept tripping over our words every time the red light turned on. In our line of work, a promise isn't just a fancy slogan on a poster. It represents someone's hard-earned money, a family's dream home, and their trust in us.

We had plenty of bloopers, forgotten lines, and re-shoots. (Honestly, if the marketing team releases the outtakes reel, some of us might have to go into hiding!) But even with all the retakes, one thing never changed—our message. Every single person on our team gave the exact same answer without even trying. For us, a promise means doing what we say we will do, delivering quality on time, and standing by our customers long after the keys are handed over.

By the time the director finally called "Wrap," the fatigue of a long shoot—and the mild sunburn from the lights—was completely overshadowed by a shared conviction. Capturing our core values on camera reminded us why we do what we do every day.

And finally, after all the shots were wrapped, the big day arrived to reveal the new face and Brand Ambassador of Jhamtani—Mr. Ranveer Singh! Bringing his incredible energy into the fold made the entire journey even more iconic.

Cameras turn off, sets get packed away, and scripts get filed—but the promise remains. At Jhamtani, The Name is a Promise, and it's a commitment we deliver on, every single day.

Living Our Promise: A Strategic Journey Through Jhamtani – The Name is a Promise

Across three dedicated Thoughtful Tuesday sessions, our organization gathered to explore the core elements of our identity—our culture, our foundational values, and the people who bring them to life every day. Under the unifying theme "Jhamtani – The Name is a Promise," this series served as a bridge connecting our organizational ideals to actionable, daily practices across all departments.

Setting the Foundation: Values and Culture The series launched with Mr Anup Jhamtani - Managing Director & Ms Meenakshi Jhamtani - Executive Director of the company introducing our refreshed core values. The opening chapter emphasized that culture cannot be defined merely by statements on a wall; rather, it is built incrementally through consistent habits, actions, and decision-making. The framework centers on four primary beliefs:

- Customer Happiness: Prioritizing seamless service and long-term customer satisfaction.
- Better Than Yesterday: Committing to continuous daily improvement across all business practices.

- Think Long Term: Making strategic decisions that build sustainable future value.
- Positive Impact on Every Life We Touch: Operating with empathy, transparency, and integrity toward employees, partners, and clients.

Core Values in Action: Cross-Functional Alignment In the second session, departmental leadership presented concrete operational blueprints aligned directly with these core values. Business heads outlined specific commitments designed to operationalize our philosophy across the entire business ecosystem:

- Operations & Infrastructure: Darshan Teredesai, COO, focused on rapid operational query resolution, continuous workflow automation, scalable infrastructure, and prioritizing team safety and work-life balance.
- Projects & Delivery: Hanumant Chorge, GM, Projects, detailed commitments toward zero-defect, on-time project handovers, site material waste reduction, sustainable construction practices, and expanded worker welfare programs.
- Sales & Client Relations: Deepika Kalghatgi, VP - Residential Sale, outlined practices to ensure a transparent home-buying journey, conversion optimization, non-pushy consultative selling, and building lifelong customer relationships.

- Strategy & Governance: Bhavik Jain, Project Director, presented initiatives for seamless cross-departmental integration, incremental policy adjustments, and executing a five-year strategic growth plan.
- Facilities & Workplace: Reshma Soman, AGM Administration & Customer Happiness Manager, committed to prompt facility service delivery, fully digitized paperless workflows, eco-friendly energy management, and a welcoming environment for staff and visitors.

- Human Resources & Talent: I highlighted strategies centered on employee satisfaction, structured skill upskilling, clear talent pipelines, and comprehensive mental health and wellness initiatives.

- Finance & Capital: Anupam Kulkarni, VP - Finance & Accounts, focused on hassle-free payment experiences, faster claim settlements, strategic capital allocation for growth, and fair vendor payouts.

To reinforce our commitment to these core values, we launched the Red Card & Blue Card system during this second session. The Blue Card serves to acknowledge and celebrate actions that align with our core values, while the Red Card constructively highlights opportunities where alignment can be improved. Designed to encourage living our values while fostering mutual care and accountability, this recognition framework ensures we stand together as one united team. In addition, Meenakshi Jhamtani introduced core value appreciation cards and quarterly rewards to honor exemplary dedication.

People: The Core of Our Workplace Culture The final session focused on the human element that drives organizational success. Culture is ultimately built through the collective experiences and contributions of our workforce. Recent human capital metrics highlight this commitment:

- Diversity and Leadership Growth: Women represent 25% of the total workforce and hold 33% of top management roles. Furthermore, female team members earned 52% of all promotions in the current cycle.
- Professional Development: Through internal capability initiatives—including over 50 peer-led Thoughtful Tuesday knowledge sessions and sponsored higher education—the organization continues to invest directly in talent progression.
- Compensation and Well-being: With average increments reaching 13% (outpacing market standards) and comprehensive health coverage extending across 397 lives, employee well-being remains a top priority.
